You have to assign a window with the results of the scanner operation or a popup in which the user can configure a new subdevice or add this subdevice. This popup should be developed by the developer himself.