

If the installation of new parameters was successful, then the value of the flag should be set to "true", and the opposite case should be "false". This allows the application to understand that the parameter change failed (if the status of the variable is "false") and the application will cancel the driver settings change, returning the old settings