

For the convenience of interface design, a standard was developed in which graphic windows should be developed in the module so that the modules of different developers looked uniformly within the framework of one project.